The Camboja started again on the 2d, doubled the Cape, and entered the Indian Ocean. Unfortunately it was the season for the monsoon, that terrible wind which threatens destruction to ships of every class. For nine days they were in the utmost peril, and so ill that death seemed almost a desirable alternative. Providence protected them, however, and they landed on the 11th at Point de Galle, in the island of Ceylon, there to recruit their exhausted strength for a few days. The missionaries begged to be taken to the house of the Spanish Benedictine who had evangelised the island. This venerable man received them with the greatest cordiality. A grand funeral had at that moment attracted a large number of Indian converts, who eagerly pressed round the French missionaries to beg medals...
